NEW BRIGHTON, RICHMOND BOROUGH,

NEW YORK

DESCRIPTION OF NEW YORK IN 1786.

By NOAH WEBSTER.

This city stands on the South-west point of an island, at the confluence of the Hudson and East-River. The principal part of the City lies on the East side of the island; altho the buildings extend from one river to the other. The length of the City, on the East-River is about two miles; but falls much short of that distance on the banks of the Hudson. Its breadth, on an average, is nearly three-quarters of a mile; and its circumference may be four miles. The plan of the city is not perfectly regular, but is laid out with reference to the situation of the ground. The principal streets run nearly parallel with the rivers. These are intersected, tho not at right angles, by streets running from river to river. In the width of the streets, there is a great diversity. Water-street and Queen-street, which occupy the banks of the East-River, are very conveniently situated for business, but they are low and too narrow; not admitting, in some places, of walks on the sides for foot-passengers. Broad-street, extending from the Exchange to City-hall, is sufficiently wide. This was originally built on each side of a creek, which penetrated almost to the City-hall. This street is low, but pleasant; and that part which did not suffer by the fire during the war, is generally well built; the other is recovering from its ruins.

But the most convenient and agreeable part of the city is Broadway. This street runs upon the height of land between the two rivers, beginning at the fort, near the South end of the City, and extending to the Hospital, in front of which it opens into an extensive plain or common. This street is wide, and elevated so as to command a delightful prospect of the town, and the Hudson.

Wall-street is generally wide and elevated, and the buildings elegant. Hanover-square and Dock-street, are conveniently situated for business, and the houses well built. William-street is also elevated and convenient, and is the principal market for the retailing of dry goods. Many of the other streets are pleasant, but most of them are irregular and narrow.

The houses are generally built of brick, and the roofs tiled. There are remaining a few houses built after the old Dutch manner; but the English taste has prevailed, almost a century.

Upon the South-west point of the island stands the fort, which is a square with four bastions; within the walls of which the Governors used formerly to reside. Below the fort, near the water, there is a line of fortifications of considerable extent, designed to command the entrance into both rivers. But it is questionable whether any number of cannon would prevent ships from passing with a favorable wind and tide; and indeed whether New York is capable of defence by land against a powerful marine force. The battery, however, in the summer season, furnishes the citizens with an agreeable walk, which is open to refreshing breezes from the bay.

The City-hall is a brick building, more strong than elegant. It is three stories in height, with wings at each end, and fronts Broad-street, which affords an extensive prospect. The first floor is an open walk, except two small apartments for the door-keeper and city watch. In the second story of the Eastern wing, is the Assembly-chamber, now occupied by Congress, and adorned with the following paintings: The portrait of the great Columbus, belonging to the Assembly of this State; a painting valuable only for its antiquity and the character of the man-the likenesses of the King and Queen of France, as large as the life, executed in a masterly manner, and presented to Congress by his Most Christian Majesty; equally valuable for the richness of the paintings, the dignity of the personages whom they represent, and as pledges of royal friendship. • The likeness of General Washington, presented by a gentleman in England; a likeness dear to every American, and destined to grace the walls of every Council chamber in the new world.

The Western wing contains a room for the Council or Senate, now occupied by the Secretary of Congress, and another for the Mayor's Court. In the body of the house is a spacious hall for the Supreme Judicial Court.

There are three houses of public worship belonging to the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, one is called the Old Dutch Church, which was built in the year 1693, and rebuilt in the year 1766; and another is called the North Church, which was founded in the year 1767, and dedicated to the service of God, in the year 1769. This last church being ruined by the British during the late war, was repaired in the year 1784, and has been used with the old church for the performance of divine service. The middle church, generally called the New Dutch Church, was built in the year 1729: it is the most spacious of the three, but was also ruined in the war, and is not yet fully repaired.

The people of this denomination were the first settlers of this State, and make a respectable part of the citizens. The church in the city is considered as one church or congregation, though worshipping in different places. The charter, or act of incorporation, was granted by William the Third, in the year 1696, when Benjamin Fletcher, Esq., was Governor of the Province. The Ministers, Elders, and Deacons, are the body corporate, and hold considerable property. Many years before the war, they found it necessary, by reason of the decline of the Dutch language, to have service performed in English, and had then two Dutch and two English Ministers. Since the war, it has been performed chiefly in English, and they have at present only two Ministers.

There are four Presbyterian Churches in the city of New York. The first was erected in the year 1619. It was built of stone, and rebuilt and enlarged in the year 1748. It is eighty feet long and sixty wide, with a cupola and bell; and stands in the upper end of Wall-street, the North side of the street, near the Broadway. The second was erected in the year 1767, is a genteel brick building, thirty-three feet long, and sixty-five feet wide, with a steeple not finished; it stands on the East side of the green, at the head of Beekman and Nassau-streets.

The congregations worshipping in these churches are connected with each other, under the care of the same Ministers, who preach alternately in them, and having the same Elders and Deacons; their temporalities also are managed by the same Trustees, incorporated under the law of the State passed in April 1784, capacitating religious societies of every denomination to incorporate themselves, for the purposes therein mentioned.

The third Presbyterian Church was erected in the year 1768, is a genteel stone building, sixty-five and-a-half feet long, and fifty-five and-a-half feet wide; and stands in Little Queen-street, not far from the Broadway. This church is also incorporated agreeably to the same law.

These three churches were occupied by the British during the late war, as hospitals and barracks, and were left by them in a most ruinous situation, and have been repaired with great neatness, and at a very great expense, by their respective congregations, since the peace.

The fourth Presbyterian church was erected in the year 1787, is a neat frame building, fifty feet long and twenty-four feet wide, and stands in Nassau-street.

The Clergy of the Presbyterian Churches of this city are maintained by the revenues arising from the rents of their pews.

There are three Episcopal Churches in New York, under one charter, which was granted the sixth of May, 1697. Trinity Church was built in the year 1696, and at several times afterwards improved and enlarged. It was situated on the West side of Broadway, in view of the Hudson, with a spacious cemetery on each side; including the tower and chancel, it was about one hundred and forty-eight feet in length and seventy-two in breadth; and the steeple one hundred and seventy-three feet in height. This was supposed to be the most stately building of the kind in America, but it was destroyed in the fire which happened just after the British troops entered the city, in 1776. It is now in contemplation to rebuild it; and several thousand pounds are already subscribed for the purpose.

St. George's Chapel, in Beekman-street, was finished in 1750. This is a neat building, formed with hewn-stone, and the roof tiled.

St. Paul's Chapel, in Broadway, was completed in 1766. This building, which is in itself elegant, is embellished with a superb monument, erected by order of Congress and at the expense of the United States, to the memory of the brave General Montgomery, who fell in the attack of Quebec, December, 31, 1775.

To the foregoing may be added the following Churches:

German Lutheran2
Roman Catholic1
Friends' Meeting1
Anabaptists1
Moravians
Jews Synagogue1

Hudson River was first discovered in 1608, by Henry Hudson, an Englishman, who sold his claim to the Dutch. In 1614, the States General granted a Patent to several merchants for an exclusive trade on the river Hudson. The same year this Company built a fort on the West side of the river, near Albany, and named it Fort Orange. The next year a fort was built on the South-west point of Manhattan's, now York island; but the first settlers planted themselves about two miles from this fort and built a church, there, the ruins of which, it is said, are still visible, near the two mile stone on the public road. In this situation, finding themselves insecure during the Wars between the English and Dutch, they left this place and planted their habitations under the guns of the fort; which laid the foundation of the present city.

New York remained in possession of the Dutch until 1664, when it was surrendered by Colonel Nicolls, who was commissioned by James, Duke of York, to whom his brother, Charles II, of England had made a grant of it, the same year. In 1667, at the peace of Breda, New York was conferred to the English, who, in exchange, ceded Surinam to the Dutch. In the war of 1673, the Dutch again possessed themselves of New York; but at the treaty of peace, signed at Westminster, the following year, New York was restored to the English, in whose hands it remained till the late Revolution.

While New York remained in possession of the Dutch, it was called New Netherlands and governed by a Schout, Burgomasters, and Schepens. From its surrender to the English, in 1664, to 1683, the province was ruled by Governors, appointed and commissioned by the Duke of York, and their council, whose rules and orders had the force of laws. From the last-named period, the people was admitted to a share of the legislative authority. The government of the city (which was first incorporated in 1696), is now in the hands of a Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council. The city is divided into seven wards, in each of which there is chosen, annually, by the people, an Alderman and an Assistant, who, together with the Mayor and Recorder, form the Common Council. The Mayor and Recorder are appointed annually by the Council of Appointment.

The Mayor's Court, which is held from time to time by adjournment, is in high reputation as a Court of Law. A Court of Sessions is likewise held for criminal causes.

The situation of the city is both healthy and pleasant. Surrounded on all sides by water, it is refreshed with cool breezes in summer, and the air in winter is more temperate than in other places under the same parallel.

York island is fifteen miles in length, and hardly one in breadth. It is joined to the main by a bridge called King's-bridge. The channels between Long and Staten islands, and between Long and York-islands, are so narrow as to occasion an unusual rapidity of the tides, which is increased by the confluence of the waters of the Hudson and East river. This rapidity, in general, prevents the obstruction of the channel by ice; so that the navigation is clear, except for a few days in seasons when the weather is uncommonly severe. There is no basin or bay for the reception of ships; but the road where they lie, in East-river, is defended from the violence of the sea by the islands which interlock with each other; so that, except that of Rhode-Island, the harbor of New York, which admits ships of any burthen, is the best in the United States.

The city is esteemed the most eligible situation for commerce in the United States. It almost necessarily commands the trade of one-half of New Jersey, most of that of Connecticut, and part of that of Massachusetts, besides the whole fertile interior country, which is penetrated by one of the largest rivers in America, navigable one hundred and seventy miles. This city imports most of the goods consumed between a line thirty miles East of Connecticut river, and twenty miles West of the Hudson, which is one hundred and thirty miles; and between the ocean and the confines of Canada, about two hundred and fifty miles; a considerable portion of which is the best-peopled of any part of the United States; and the whole territory contains at least half a million of people, or one-sixth of the inhabitants in the Union. Besides, some of the other States are partially supplied with goods from New York. But in the staple commodity, flour, Pennsylvania and Maryland have rivalled it—the superfine flour of those States commanding a higher price than that of New York.

In the manufacture, likewise, of iron, paper, cabinet-works, &c., Pennsylvania exceeds not only New York, but all her sister States. In times of peace, however, New York will command more commercial business than any town in the United States. In time of war, it will be insecure, without a marine force; but a small number of ships will be able to defend it from the most formidable attacks by sea.

Eight miles northward of the city, is a strait between Long and York islands, which is, with great propriety, called Hell-gate. The passage is narrow, and the middle of it is obstructed with rocks, so as to occasion a most violent rapidity of the tides. Except at high and low water, this strait is impassable, without a strong breeze sufficient to counteract the current, and even then the navigation is extremely hazardous. The tides which flow from the East and West, meet at Frog's Point, several miles to the eastward of Hell-gate; for which reason the ebbing and flowing are remarkably sudden at this place. The channel at Hell-gate is deep enough for frigates, but vessels usually wait for high or low water, when the sea is generally smooth, and the strait is navigable on each side of the rocks.

A want of good water is a great inconvenience to the citizens, there being few wells in the city. Most of the people are supplied, every day, with fresh water, conveyed to their doors in casks, from a pump near the head of Queen-street, which receives it from a pond, almost a mile from the city. Several proposals have been made by individuals, to supply the citizens by pipes; but none have yet been accepted.

The following is the character of the inhabitants of this city, drawn by a faithful hand in 1756:

"New York is one of the most social Places on the Continent. The Men collect themselves into weekly Evening Clubs. The Ladies, in Winter, are frequently entertained either at Concerts of Musick or Assemblies, and make a very good appearance. They are comely and dress well, and scarce any of them have distorted Shapes. Tinctured with a Dutch Education, they manage their Families with becoming Parsimony, good Providence, and singular Neatness. The Practice of extravagant Gaming, common to the fashionable Part of the fair Sex, in some Places, is a Vice with which my Countrywomen cannot justly be charged. There is nothing they so generally neglect as Reading, and indeed all the Arts for the Improvement of the Mind, in which, I confess, we have set them the Example. They are modest, temperate and charitable; naturally sprightly, sensible, and good-humoured; and, by the Helps of a more elevated Education, could possess all the Accomplishments desirable in the Sex. Our Schools are in the lowest Order; the instructors want Instruction; and through a long shameful Neglect of the Arts and Sciences, our common Speech is extremely corrupt, and the Evidences of a bad Taste, both as to Thought and Language, are visible in all our Proceedings, publick and private.

"The People, both in Town and Country, are sober, industrious, and hospitable, though intent on Gain. The richer Sort keep very plentiful Tables, abounding with great Varieties of Flesh, Fish, Fowl, and all kinds of Vegetables.

"The Inhabitants of this Colony are in general healthy and robust; taller, but shorter lived, than Europeans; and, both with Respect to their Minds and Bodies, arrive sooner to an Age of Maturity. Breathing a serene, dry Air, they are more sprightly in their natural Tempers than the People of England; and hence Instances of Suicide are here very uncommon. Few Physicians amongst us are eminent for their Skill. Quacks abound like Locusts in Egypt; and too many have recommended themselves to a full Practice and profitable Subsistence. This is less to be wondered at, as the Profession is under no kind of Regulation."—Smith's History of New York, page 211.

Admitting this be a candid representation of facts, at the time it was drawn, yet many material changes have taken place which ought to be noticed.

The change of the inhabitants, by the Revolution, was considerable, and had some effect upon the general character of the citizens. Notwithstanding, in point of sociability and hospitality, New York is hardly exceeded by any town in the United States. The principal families, by associating, in their public amusements, with the middling class of well-bred citizens, render their rank subservient to the happiness of society, and prevent that party-spirit, which an affectation of superiority in certain families in Philadelphia, has produced in that city—a spirit which disturbs or destroys their public amusements, and which has given the citizens, too generally, perhaps, the reputation of being inhospitable.*

Several causes, however, have operated to diminish the sociability of the citizens of New York, particularly the change of inhabitants and the loss of property, during the ravages of war, and the unfavorable state of business since the establishment of peace. These causes have had their influences in all parts of America; and perhaps as little in New York as in any other town.

* It is presumed that the general character of the citizens in all our large towns, is, in some measure, formed by the manners of the prevailing sect or nation. The reserve of the Quakers in Philadelphia has been communicated to all classes of citizens, and assists in forming their general character. The neatness, industry and parsimony of the Dutch, were the characteristics of the citizens of New York, before the revolution; and will probably be visible in their manners a long time after national distinctions are lost.

The charge of neglecting reading and the improvements of the mind, might be just in Smith's time, but, if just, it did not lie solely against the inhabitants of this city. That the Americans were formerly, and may be still, behind the citizens of London, in their attention to literature and the arts, will be acknowledged, nor is it surprizing. Yet, no person acquainted with the well-bred American ladies, can charge them, generally, with ignorance; and there are great numbers in New York whose minds are highly improved, and whose conversation is as inviting as their personal charms.

Nor are the schools in this city in such a deplorable situation as they were formerly. There are many which are kept by reputable and able men; and Columbia College affords a very favorable prospect.

It must not, however be concealed, that Smith's description of the state of education is now but too just, with respect to the country at large. There are several good academies in the country; but many parts are either unfurnished with schools, or the schools which they have are kept by low ignorant men, and are consequently worse than none. This remark may be extended to a large proportion of the United States.

An enquirer, who would wish to acquaint himself with the true state of the people of New York, their manners and government, would naturally ask the citizens for their societies for the encouragement of sciences, arts, manufactures, &c.? For their public libraries? For the patrons of literature? For their well-regulated academies? For their female academies for instructing young ladies in geography, history, belles-lettres, &c.? Such enquiries might be made with propriety.

The practice of physic, it is presumed, is on a better footing than when Smith wrote his History. That it is capable of many improvements, in all parts of America, will hardly be denied by the faculty themselves. There are, however, many eminent physicians and surgeons in New York; and it is only to be regretted that there exists a necessity of going abroad for knowledge which ought to be obtained at home.

All free governments abound with lawyers. Where men have the privilege of thinking and acting for themselves, they will involve themselves in debt and quarrel with their neighbors. In proportion to the debts and disputes of the people, lawyers will multiply. Of these, America furnishes a plentiful growth, and New York has its share. In this State, the practice of Law is conformed to the English mode; and is, perhaps, better regulated than in the other States. The several degrees in the profession—the number of critical examinations that candidates are obliged to pass thro before they can be admitted as Counsellors in the higher courts; together with the time of study required by the rules of admission, render an access to the first honors of the bar so difficult as to preclude ignorant pretenders to the important science of law. New York can boast of many men eminent in a very liberal profession, and which has hitherto furnished America with some of her most able legislators. It is, however, to be feared that a too rigid adherence to the forms of legal process, in England, has sometimes perplexed the road to justice, and prevented valuable improvements in the practice, not only of this, but most of the States.

On a general view of this City, as described thirty years ago, and in its present state, the comparison is flattering to the present age, particularly the improvements in taste, elegance of manners, and that easy, unaffected civility and politeness which form the happiness of social intercourse.

It is found, by a memorandum in one of the old Registers, that the number of inhabitants in the City, taken by order of the King in the year 1697, was as follows:

The account which gives 80,000 whites and 20,000 blacks, must be inaccurate.

The following account of the number of dwelling-houses in the principal towns of the United States is given mostly from the Editor's own enumeration in the years 1785 and 1786. The round number nearest the actual number is given, merely to assist the memory. The difference, which is never greater than five, is immaterial.

^{*} It is said that Philadelphia contains 50,000 inhabitants. This account must be too high. I find by actual enumeration, that in some towns the houses contain nearly 9 souls each upon an average; but generally not more than 7; suppose 9 souls in a house in Philadelphia at the time this enumeration was made, viz. in March 1786, the inhabitants were but 40,500. I will allow 100 houses for mistake, and this will make the inhabitants 41,400.

The inhabitants of New York in 1786, were less than 23,614; for in this number are included all the people on the island. The houses were numbered and found to be 3,340. But suppose them 3,500, and the souls in each will not average 7; and this number is high enough for our towns in general.

Why should we estimate the inhabitants of Philadelphia higher than Boston and New York, the houses in which will not average 7 souls? Suppose the houses in Philadelphia to be 5,000, which is more than the real number, and 8 souls to a house, which is also more than the actual average number, and the inhabitants are on these principles, but 40,000. I cannot believe that this estimate is not too high, until I see the actual number published by authority.

In taking the number of houses in different towns, I invariably found it to fall short, at least a fifth, of the common estimate made by the most judicious inhabitants.—The American Magazine, N. Y. March, 1788.

To the Inhabitants of the City of New-York.

GENTLEMEN,

MR. FRANKS returns his fincere thanks to his Friends and the Public, for their kind and liberal encouragement towards his publication of the New-York Directory; he humbly requests they may indulgently excuse any errors, inaccuracies, or omissions, which may appear, and impute them only to the local disadvantages he laboured under, in this first attempt; as he intends in the future editions, he shall have the honour of annually presenting them, to have it more in his power to be exact, correct and circumstantial; as the number of subscribers are but sew (which he attributes to a want of knowledge of the utility of this production, it being the first of the kind ever attempted in this city;) he makes bold to call on the citizens at large, for every information, that they think will prove conducive to its future correctness. Their directions will be thankfully received and gratefully acknowledged by Mr. Franks, at his lodgings, No. 66, Broad-way, or at Mr. Kollock's Printing-Office.

N. B. Mr. Franks has ready for Publication, a Treatise of BOOK-KEEP-ING, digefled for the inland and foreign Trade of America.——This Work, which he hopes will prove very useful, he would willingly submit, previous to his putting it to Press, to the inspection of the Gentlemen of the Mercantile Line, and will consider himself much honoured if they favour him with their patronage, as he intends laying it before them at their respective residences.

DAVID FRANKS,

Conveyancer and Accountant, No. 66, Broadway.

BEGS Leave to return his fincere thanks to his friends and the public, for their past favours, and hopes the cheapness of the following will continue him their favours:

Drawing a Lease and Release, on Parchment,

Ditto, ditto, ditto, on Paper,

Ditto, a Bond,

Ditto a Power of Attorney,

Mr. Franks having served a regular apprenticeship to his father, a very eminent attorney in Dublin, and having, besides, transacted business, for some years, for Counsellor Franklin of said city, he hopes, will entitle him to the countenance of the Gentlemen of the Law Department in this metropolis; to merit whose esteem and approbation will be his particular study,—he will thankfully receive business from them on the most reasonable terms.

N. B. To prevent complaints, generally arising from employing unexperienced Clerks, Mr. Franks has lately engaged a young man from Dublin, of unexceptionable abilities.

Yesterday sailed with a fair wind for Charleston, S. C. the ship Grace, Capt. John Armour, with whom went passengers, the Baron de Steuben, Major North and others.

It is somewhat singular that house rent should be so high at present, as one third of the city is now to be let, as may be seen by the abundance of labels upon doors and windows, for that purpose. It bears no proportion with the prices of almost every necessary of life, which are not only comparatively cheap, but plenty. There must be some kind of infatuation among tenants, to induce them to give the oppressive rents the landlords now demand. If a man lends money and takes more than six or seven per cent per annum, he is called an usurer. Yet a man may buy a house for 3 or $4000 \, l$. for ever, and rent it out at 80 or $100 \, l$. per annum, without being branded as an usurer.

Theatre, the tragedy of Richard the Third, with a farce called the Mock Doctor; or, the Dumb Lady Cured.

The NEW-YORK DIRECTORY,

is this Day Published,

And to be sold by S. Kollock at his book store, opposite the Coffee House; and by Francis Childs No 189 Water Street.

To the Inhabitants of the City of New York.

Gentlemen,

Mr. Franks returns his sincere thanks to his Friends and the Public, for their kind and liberal encouragement towards his publication of the New-York Directory; he humbly requests they may indulgently excuse any errors, inaccuracies or omissions which may appear, and impute them only to the local disadvantages he laboured under, in this first attempt; as he intends in the future editions, he shall have the honour of annually presenting them, to have it more in his power to be exact, correct and circumstantial; as the number of subscribers are but few (which he attributes to a want of knowledge of the utility of this production, it being the first of the kind ever attempted in this city;) he makes bold to call on the citizens at large for every information that they think will prove conducive to its future correctness. Their directions will be thankfully received, and gratefully acknowledged by Mr. Franks, at his lodgings, No 66 Broadway, or at Mr. Kollock's Printing-Office.

N. B. Mr. Franks has ready for publication, a treatise of book-keeping, digested for the inland and foreign trade of America. This work, which he hopes will prove very useful, he would willingly submit, previous to his putting it to press, to the inspection of the gentlemen of the mercantile line, and will consider himself much honored if they favor him with their patronage, as he intends laying it before them at their respective residences.

 The New-York Directory, will, in future, be published every twentieth day of May in each year.

The public are informed that the Theatre will not be opened on Monday next, on account of so many performers being indisposed.

Fashions for 1786. It is all the fashion among polite people, to play cards on Sunday evening.

Cork bustles are quite the ton, also for ladies to stoop much when they walk the streets.

To visit at seven o'clock, is the fashion. Husbands should not be seen in company with their wives, it is very vulgar and unfashionable.

It is the fashion for gentlemen to patch and perfume themselves, before they are seen among ladies.

It is the fashion for young ladies to invite young gentlemen to visit them.

It is the fashion to leave the assemblies and Concerts at eleven o'clock.

It is the fashion for ladies to drink porter in the afternoon—tea is quite out of date among genteel people.

17th

The subscribers having a claim to the house and lot, now occupied by William Elsworth, and distinguished by No 28 in Queen Street, caution every person from purchasing the same from William Elsworth.

The city of late has been much pestered by a crowd of sturdy beggars, under the denomination of lemon and orange hawkers; some of these are not only hale and healthy, but stout, young, robustious looking fellows, whom nature calculated for holding the plow in preference to the employment of old women and invalids. It is partly owing to the vast shoals of these lazy, itinerent fruit criers and others of the same description, that the price of labor is so high.

To be sold to-day, at the noted house lately occupied by John Cape, situated at the corner of the Broadway and Little Queen Street, a large and excellent assortment of household and kitchen furniture, consisting of beds, bedsteads, tables, chairs, looking-glasses, plates dishes &c. &c. All the remaining stock of liquors, consisting of wines, brandy, spirits, porter &c. A great variety of wine glasses, decanters, jelly glasses, &c. &c. Several pair very good and-irons, shovels, tongs &c. Two large cast iron stoves, a number of pots, kettles, candlesticks, &c. &c. Taken by execution. The sale will continue from day to day, until the whole are disposed of.

M. Willett, Sheriff.

On a Lady's Hoop.

Hail mighty hoop? the scene of joy,
To ladies under fifty;
To thee they owe the sprightly step,
And bulwark when they're thrifty.

The slender foot so neat and fair,
Appears most wond'rous nice;
The garters shew their tassel knots,
Enough one to entice.

To thee they owe the room they have, When to the Play they go; And are secure with elbow room, To keep off every Beau.

Albany Stage Waggons.

The proprietors of the Albany stage waggons, after thanking the public for their encouragement hitherto, beg leave to inform them that they will commence running through from New-York to Albany three times per week, performing the Journey in two days; the waggon will move from Mr. Corre's tavern in New-York, and Mr. Lewis's in Albany, every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, precisely at 5 o'clock, and return on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday following; and, as the roads are now dry, and in good repair, the fare of a passenger will be no more than three pence per mile, during the continuance of the good roads; 150 lb. baggage will pay equal to a passenger.

As the proprietors have supplied the roads with fresh relieves of horses, and placed a number of new waggons, at proper distances, to prevent accidents; and also, regulated the stage houses on the roads, so as to prevent unnecessary and unequal expence to passengers; they flatter themselves that the safe, easy, expeditious and cheap methods of travelling, will undoubtedly engage the attention and approbation of the public.

The proprietors will not be answerable for baggage when the owners are with it.

The waggons will continue their usual rout until the first of May. The public are requested to take notice that no letters can be conveyed in the waggon, independent of the mail, as the contract made with the Post-Master-General for carrying the mail will not admit of it.

Found in the Street one dozen of stockings, the owner will apply to the printer of the Daily Advertiser.

People talk about cash being scarce and credit low. When two acquaintances meet they naturally ask each other "what news" and they both as naturally answer "none—there's no news stirring our way, except the damned scarcity of money." Now how in the devil's name, as he is synonimous with money, can this be news? What every one has in his mouth cannot be news.

The Regents of the University are requested to meet this day at Columbia College at 11 o'clock A. M. and proceed from there to St. Paul's church to attend the public commencement.

After a long night of darkness and confusion, America, like another Phoenix, rising out of the flames, begins to immerge from the anarchy attending a tedious war. The seats of learning are again renewed, genius seeks her favorite retreats, science and industry prompt to improvement, and our sons and daughters, from the schools come accomplished into society, useful to themselves and beneficial to their fellow citzens.

These reflections were suggested, and considerably heightened, by seeing the first commencement of Columbia College, which was held in St. Paul's Church, yesterday. The most respectable and numerous assemblage of Ladies and Gentlemen that we recollect for a long time were present on this occasion. About 12 o'clock, a grand procession set out from the College, and went to St. Paul's Church, where the Rev.

Mr. Provost opened the business of the day, by a prayer suited to the occasion.

Mr. De Witt Clinton then spoke a salutatory oration in Latin—De utilitate et necessitate studiorum Artium liberalium.

Mr. Philip H. Livingston, on the Importance of Commerce.

If we were to judge by our rents, this city was never in a more flourishing condition. A hut, a stall, a chamber, which once was scarcely inhabited, now lets for a handsome sum of money, every shop, store, and house are in the same proportion. When every thing else is declining rapidly to its former level, the landlords are exacting the last farthing from distressed tenants. Houses are even left vacant because their owners will not consent to a diminution of ther demands, proportioned to the reduction of other articles. This is one of the difficulties which ought to have redress, that honest industry may not suffer, to indulge these insatiable leeches, who fatten and are bloated by the blood of the honest mechanic, and hard working labourer.

Let any person show a single reason why these things are thus. If a single case were submitted to a jury, and rested upon the real value of the rent, it would be soon on a different footing. The highest price for a house ever known before the war, was one hundred pounds except under some extraordinary circumstances, but many at this moment let from eighty to a hundred and fifty pounds, per annum, and the smaller tenements in proportion. This is one among the number of causes which must ruin the city, by inhancing the price of labor, and by fixing a standard to support the extravagance of the present hour, and it must be reduced within a more reasonable compass if we mean to subsist as a people,

We are informed of an unfortunate encounter that took place on Friday afternoon last, (April 21), about 6 o'clock, behind the Hospital, between Mr. Samuel Curson, merchant of this city, and Mr. Burling, a gentleman from Baltimore. They were accompanied by two of their friends (as seconds) Mr. Farquhar, and Major Fairlie; the distance agreed upon was only four paces; Mr. C. requested his antagonist to fire first—this he did; and Mr. C. fell on the spot, having received a wound near the groin, which is pronounced mortal. Circumstances which led to this desperate decision, probably are reported erroneously, and exaggerated by the friends of either party, and in the relation are not material—the event is sufficiently distressing.

It seems Mr. Burling for some supposed injuries done his family by Mr. Curson, had pursued him to the West Indies, to London, and from thence back to the continent again, and lately arrived in this city, where he obtained that revenge which he had so indefatigably sought. On arriving at the destined spot, they took their distance at ten paces, when Mr. B. desired Mr. C. to fire, but he declined, saying "he had done him no injury, and he did not wish to shed his blood." After some altercation between the parties, Mr. B. fired and lodged the contents of his pistol in his antagonist's groin, which is pronounced mortal.

Theatre this evening. The Constant Couple and Midas.

Daniel Tucker & Co have for sale Barbadoes and St. Kitts Rum.

We are happy to assure the public that our information of yesterday respecting the circumstances of the recounter between Mr. Curson and Mr. Burling are not altogether founded in fact. We have it from authority that no gentlemen accompanied them as seconds; but such as were present, went out with a determination to prevent if possible, the disagreeable consequences which resulted from the unfortunate difference between them, but without effect. With respect to the distance the gentlemen stood from each other we were also misinformed; instead of only four paces, it was ten.

The destruction of a part of this city by fire in 1776, opened a door for improvement. Stimulated by the example of London, upon a similar occasion, the Corporation apply to the Legislature; their requests are complied with; two streets heretofore the abode of dirt and diseases are to be widened and thrown into one, a measure which would have contributed to the health and embellishment of the town. Some old women meet scold and exclaim against the profanity of exposing the dark recesses of Stone Street to public view, and suffering the garish sun to look in upon the hallowed mysteries of Petticoat Lane: The magistrates are convinced; they hang their heads; they relinquish their scheme with as much rapidity as they embraced it. The widest and best situated street requires nothing but levelling and paving to be the most elegant in America; an order is given for the purpose, is revoked and readopted; building is suspended till the pendulum ceases to vibrate: some penurious citizens exclaim against the expence, it is determined to leave Broadway as it is, with one side some yards higher than the other and a payement promising no entertainment either to man or horse.

On Monday evening, for the benefit of Mr. Henry, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, there was as numerous and respectable an audience as ever we remember to have seen in this city, above two hundred persons went away finding it impossible to gain admission. The performance of the Maid of the Mill gave general satisfaction—all the performers exerted themselves in a particular manner, but we should do great injustice to the abilities of Miss Maria Storer, if we did not remark that her singing is truly masterly. infinitely beyond any thing ever heard on this side the Atlantic, her voice is harmony itself; to be equalled only by her refined ear and great taste; her performance was both chaste and judicious; she seems not only to have made singing, but speaking her particular study. Her adoption of different dresses were elegantly characteristic of approved judgment and fancy. The after-piece shewed her knowledge of the vis comica, and was received with unbounded applause.

Col. Humphreys who lately arrived from France, brought with him a number of elegant swords, made by order of Congress to be presented for acts of heroism and valour in the late revolution. Col. June 1st

It is highly diverting, to observe the manœuvres of our modern high-life-below-stairs in the city. The air of importance and self-sufficiency, the forbidding shrug of the larboard shoulder, the clean turn upon the heel, the significant whistle, with a gate betokening surprise, or an impetuous staring in the face, are now the rage of our houses of public rendezvous. An American must be possessed of head, nose, mouth, chin, body & leg, of just such dimensions; he must be dressed according to such a taylor's mode; he must possess the graces and have a good stock of impertinence, if he would avoid these disgusting receptions from the rabble of exotics that surround him.

Query, whether, were there free female seminaries established, the expences of which to be paid by a general tax, the minds of these greatest ornaments to creation, and only sources of domestic happiness, would not be led from the baneful study of external decorations, to the more heavenly employment of increasing their stock of useful knowledge, and improving that proportion of natural genius which is the simple gift of nature.

On Monday at the Court of Sessions, an action was brought by the executors of Mr. Neet of the city of London, merchant against Mr. Sands of this city, merchant, for a debt contracted previous to the late war for upwards of £1200, with interest thereon from the commencement of the war to this time. Whether the British shall be paid interest monies during the war, a time when the principal could not be paid, being a question of no small importance to the merchants of this and the American States, was warmly debated by the counsels of both parties, and after a hearing of twelve hours, the jury brought in, as their judgment, that Mr. Sands should not pay said interest

On Tuesday last, the Anniversary of American Independence was celebrated here with every demonstration of joy.— The morning was ushered in by a discharge of thirteen cannon, and the ringing of all the city bells; at twelve o'clock a procession moved from the City-Hall to the house of his Excellency the President of Congress, where his Excellency the Governor, attended by the Lieutenant-Governor, the Chancellor, Judges and the other State officers, with his Honor the Mayor, and Corporation, the Marine Society, and the Chamber of Commerce, presented the compliments of the day. They afterwards proceeded to the City-tavern, attended by a numerous concourse of citizens, and partook of a cold collation, provided for them by the Corporation. The day was spent in great festivity, and closed with the firing of cannon.

Fire-works having been prohibited by the city council, a number of gentlemen retired to Governor's Island in the evening, from whence they exhibited some brilliant pieces of artifice which highly entertained a concourse of citizens of both sexes assembled on the battery. And, to conclude the festivity, the ingenious managers of our theatre, Messrs. Hallam and Co. exhibited a piece of transparent painting, which is thus described. Two double columns of the Corinthian order, one on each side of a monument, at the upper part of which was wrote, in eligible characters, the illustrious names of Warren, Montgomery, Mercer, and Wooster, under these a spread eagle, with a sword in one claw, and 13 arrows in the other, and the label Liberty proceeding from his bill, next the names of the still living American magnaninimous heroes, Washington, Greene, Knox, and Wayne; on the upper extremity of the monument were two angels, and a flame issuing heaven-ward; at the foot were affixed on each side, the genii of Agriculture and liberty, and in the centre between them, thirteen stars in a circle. On the foot of the right pedestal are three sheaves, and on the left a ship under full sail.

The anniversary meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati was also held at Corre's tavern, on the 4th inst in commemoration of the day, when the Hon. Baron de Steuben, was elected President, the Hon. Philip Schuyler, Esq. Vice President, Philip Van Cortlandt, Esq. Treasurer, and Robert Pemberton, Esq. Secretary of the Society for the ensuing year.

An elegant oration suitable to the occasion was delivered by Col. Hamilton, and an address by Col. Walker, greatly pleasing to a crowded audience. The Society dined together at four o'clock, after which the following toasts were drank, under a discharge of thirteen cannon.

The United States in Congress.

On Tuesday evening last a great number of people assembled in the Bowery Lane to gratify their curiosity in the science of ballooning. About sunset the aerostatical genius finished the inflation; when to his utter confusion, and the no small disappointment of the spectators he was unable to raise it five feet above the earth, although himself and three more kept shoving it with their hands a considerable time, till at last it overset, and immediately went off in fumo, which excited the laughter of some, and the chagrin of others; one gentleman of the latter class, unable to brook the disappointment, discharged his ire on the head of the aeronaut, by dusting his hair with his cane, to the no small diversion of the numerous spectators. They not considering, that the Prince of the Power of the Air, being perhaps fearful that the ingenious artist intended to invade his dominions, determined to put him out of countenance, by oversetting the balloon, and burning it to ashes.

The very small mouth which every species of the whale has been furnished with by nature, the very largest ever yet seen, never possessing a throat capable of receiving a man's arm, philosophers have been induced to think this could not be the animal within whose belly the prophet Jonah spent three days and three nights; but as philosophers seldom destroy one hypothosis without raising another, it has been imagined that a shark must have received Jonah, when thrown overboard. A little attention to the natural history of the shark race proves clearly that learned men can at times write very great nonsense; for when sharks seize their prey, they always crush it with their sharp teeth, and besides the stomach possesses such corrosive quality as even to digest bones in twenty four hours. The history of Jonah is open to opinion still.

It is curious to observe, a certain enormity which is chiefly in use among the politer and better bred people of this city, which is the ceremonies, bows, curtisies, whisperings, smiles, winks, nods and other agreeable salutations, which take place in almost every public resort; the church itself is not free from this ridiculous custom.

If there are Englishmen whose attachment to the laws of Bacchus, obliges them to make frequent meetings over old London porter, and Madeira they should always carry with them the reflection that in a republican government, there are songs which may please their palates, and be grating to the ears of freemen. A company lately spending the evening in one of the upper rooms at the Coffee House; in the height of their mirth and loyalty, broke out with "Rule Britannia" a song very ridiculous in a country like this, where their armies were conquered, and their nation defeated. Whenever it may again please them to sing the same ditty, they had better alter the chorus, and instead of bawling

Rule Britannia, Britannia rule the waves, Britons never will be slaves.

To sing it thus

Poor Britannia, Britannia wave the rules; Britans ever will be fools!!

No Money! is the cry of every class of citizens, yet how well conduct and appearances coincide with the exclamation. every person of observation may be convinced. Inspect the dress of male and female, observe their manner of living, view them rushing into every scence of amusement and dissipation, and ask yourself the question, how this mode of living can be carried on without money? Frugality is fled from among us; some of our rulers set the example of extravagance-and every class of citizens, rapidly follow. Established Clubs are daily meeting, when the invention is racked for delicacies, where with to fill the luxurious board! Trades mens bills are disregarded, and the knocker often proclaims a dun, which upon every principle should be discharged. But the necessitious tradesman may call again; the cash is expended. Yet station yourself at the door of any public amusement, and you will find these very characters crowding to see exhibitions which can only give a momentary pleasure. Deluded metropolis, how is your virtue fallen? Shake off your infatuation ere it be too late; receive discarded economy and frugality with cheerfulness and delight, an in their company exert yourselves to regain lost possessions, that the gloomy state of bankruptcy may be a stranger, and contentment, sufficiency and happiness ensue.

Wednesday evening an atrocious attempt was made to burn the City Tavern, in Broadway. A villain who had gained admission by unbolting a door, robbed the servants of some money and a silver watch; and then to prevent discovery placed a candle to some pine boards which were in the room, intending that the house should take fire as if by accident. Many circumstances render it almost certain that a William Miller, who some time before had been a waiter to Mr. Corre was guilty of the villainy. On which he was apprehended.

At Westbury, on Long Island, a woman a few days ago, was delivered of three living children, two boys and a girl; all of them are like to do well.

In addition to the account of the attempt to burn the City Tavern, we have since been informed that a fire was also kindled in a closet at the head of the stairway, in the second story, which must have burned for some time, as the floor was all burnt black, and some picture frames, to which the fire must have been first communicated, were nearly half consumed. By what happy accident it extinguished itself is unaccountable. Had it proceeded, several lives must have been lost, as there were many lodgers up stairs, that could not possibly have escaped.

My wife has behaved badly—so bad that I cannot live with her. She has run me in debt, and I have nothing to pay, and perhaps never will have. All persons are notified not to trust her, as I cannot pay, and her conduct is so base that I will not pay any debts of her contracting. John Dally.

It behoves us to caution our fellow citizens to be on their guard against a travelling gang of robbers, that have lately made such inroads upon private property, it being shrewdly suspected that some of the members of that abandoned society are now harboured in this city. The modes of punishment for petits larcenies, adopted by the civil authority of this city reflect the highest honors upon the good judgment of that respectable body. There are now in the city a number of thieves, gamblers, &c. chained to each other at the public works, several of whom were obliged to work in the petit maitre habits in which they were detected when committing their villanies.

Isaac Willetts, offers a reward of 100 pounds, for the detection of the robbers who broke into his house, No 2 Pearl Street, and took cash to the amount of 575 pounds, 16 shillings, and 8 pence, in gold and silver coin.

At a meeting of the Society of the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, held in London, on the 10th of May last, a debate of some length took place, to determine whether the money which before the war was annually sent to New York, should be continued in that channel, or sent to New Brunswick; which was carried in favor of the latter place, by a very considerable majority.

Wanted to rent, by the year, a neat well finished house, fit to accommodate two single gentlemen and a servant; whoever has such a house to let, between St. Paul's Church and the College, or in that vicinity, may hear of a person disposed to treat for it, by applying to the Rev. Mr. Nugent, at Mr. George Shea's No 1. Hunter's Quay.

Augustus Van Horne, of No 58 Smith Street, offers a Half Joe reward for the capture of his Negro slave Caesar. He is a very talkative, saucy, impertinent fellow.

On Thursday night about 9 o'clock, a gentleman who lives on the Battery, and whose house was lately robbed, being on the watch, saw a number of men looking about the house, who he suspected to be part of a gang at present infesting this city. He fired among them, but did not happen to hurt any; on which they seized him, and beat him in a shocking manner, and then made off.

Scarce a night passes, in which there is not a robbery committed or attempted in this city. That part of it particular, contiguous to the Exchange and Battery, seems marked by the banditti for the scene of their enormities. Some improvement seems necessary in our nocturnal guard, which may give to our citizens assurances of safety in their persons and property during the hours devoted to rest.

7th

The dispute between Gen. Webb and William Livingston, Jun. was terminated at Paules Hook, on the 5th. inst. in a manner that does credit to the parties; and must we conceive be pleasing to the real friends of both. The distance was agreed upon and the pistols loaded by their seconds, on a signal agreed upon for the gentlemen to discharge, Gen. Webb fired, Mr. Livingston reserved his, and addressed Gen. Webb, in the following manner.

"Sir, you have missed me, I came here to answer demands you had against me, had you suppressed that letter, which I never said you had, your life would be a recompence. I cannot ask, I shall discharge my pistol in the air;" which he did. The seconds declared the contest honorably settled, and to Gen. Webb, that he had ample satisfaction, and advised the contending gentlemen to reconciliation and friendship, which took place on the ground.

D. V. Horne, E. Haskel.

In consequence of the vigilence of the inhabitants, the attempts of robbery have become less frequent. Finding that some of their coadjutors are in custody, and the citizens every where on the watch to apprehend the remainder, the gang very wisely thought it prudent to suspend their operations in town for a time, until an imaginary security might again leave our property exposed to their mercy: but, while prudence pointed out the propriety of this mode of conduct, necessity directed that some other temporary means of supply should take place. Their scene of action, we understand, has been accordingly changed; and as far as we can learn, is at present directed to the suburbs. The first attempt, in their new scheme, was made Sunday last on a citizen, walking in that part, near the Bowery, formerly called Bayard's

Wood, but at present a sort of shrubbery. This gentleman, tempted by the fineness of the evening to extend his walk. perceived an ill looking fellow lurking in the shrub, who, on discovering him alone, made towards him, armed with a weighty stick. Being quite defenceless, and suspecting the fellow's intentions, the gentleman picked up a stone, which he secured in the center of his handkerchief, and being thus in some measure prepared, he pursued his walk, still keeping an eve on his suspected enemy. The other, having observed his motions and finding they indicated suspicion, suddenly desisted; and, when this gentleman had gained a considerable distance, he could perceive that this fellow had resumed his former station; waiting, he is certain, the approach of some unwary passenger who might prove an easier prey. As, in all probability, the fruits of this newly adopted mode may not be sufficient to maintain these gentry in stile, there will still exist a necessity for vigilant watchfulness. It may be expected that those villains, finding their new system unproductive, will re commence their depredations in town, and lay the citizens under contribution to support those very industrious members of society.

To be sold at public vendue, at John McFarlane's store, No 19 Nassau Street, three doors above the Mayors. All his remaining stock of India and English, china, glass and earthen ware. Sale to begin this afternoon, at three o'clock, and to continue from day to day till all are sold.

A correspondent laments the increase of Lawyers throughout the land, as threatning to future prosperity and degrading to freemen. Parents as soon as their children have got a little smattering of Latin, place them under the tutelage of an attorney, as a sure guide to wealth and fame. An honest trade in former days, was all that people of common ability and education were ambitious of, but now no profession is genteel, but the lawyer and the merchant * * * * the lawyers are now creeping into every post of importance, and thrusting themselves whereever there is a vacancy. Our Congress, our Assembly are crowded with them, and even in our great commercial convention, there are five lawyers to one merchant.

Lately came to this city, a yery singular black man, who it is said is quite ignorant of letters, yet he has preached in the Methodist church several times to the acceptance of several well disposed judicious people. He delivers his distourses with great zeal and pathos, and his language and connection is by no means contemptible. It is the wish of several of our correspondents, that the same black man may be so far successful, as to rouse the dormant zeal of numbers of our slothful white people, who seem very little affected about the concerns of another world.

Messrs. Loudon, I perceived in your paper an advertisement signed by John Cabenbaragh, wherein he advertises his wife for eloping from his bed and board, and desiring all persons not to trust her on his account. Such a low practice deserves early notice, and such a lazy drunken fellow deserves to be kicked for so doing. He used his first wife (my mother) like a brute: Fifteen months ago she was struck both lame and speechless by the dead palsey, and is helpless to this day; she being in the 60th year of her age. And this fellow knew she had a little substance, he persuaded her to marry him; which was done without my own or my sisters consent. We spoke to the minister of the church we belong to, not to marry them; which he absolutely refused to do; but they found one J. d. G. to pronounce the matrimonial ceremony. It is much to be regretted, that any clergyman should be allowed to marry people, who are entirely unfit for that state, without knowing who or what they are. This Cabenbaragh, when he found that the money did not answer his expectations, began to use her as he did his former wife; of which she often complained, and at last they mutually agreed to part. This same old fellow helped her things on G. Baker. the cart to set her off.

It has been suggested by a superior genius, that the city, could be improved by adopting the Duke of Bridgewater's system of canals, one of the advantages set forth, was, that the citizens might ride from the ship yards to the old battery, and that a revenue would arise by the establishment of a ferry, that the proprietors of the Coffee House should convert part of that building into an elegant tavern, for the entertainment of such ladies and gentlemen, as would not choose to travel in a storm.

By accounts from Baltimore we are informed, the American Company will leave that place about the first of October, and proceed to Richmond, in Virginia, where they propose to reside and perform several weeks; after which Messrs. Hallam and Henry intend with their whole suite, to repair to this city, and early in December open their theatre in Johnstreet, with every possible exertion that may justly merit the favour of their long approved, and most indulgent patrons, the ladies, gentlemen and worthy inhabitants of New-York.

Sunday last, in the river, between the Battery and Governor's island, a boat from Shrewsbury, laden with wood, was run down by one of the Elizabeth-Town ferry boats, which damaged her gunwale in such a manner, as to give free admission to the water, which rushed in with such impetuosity, that the hands were obliged to run into Whitehall slip, the first dock they could make. From the distressed situation in which the boat was left by this accident, she would inevitably have sunk, had it happened a distance from the shore; and, notwithstanding some boats were convenient, it is more than probable lives would have been lost.

Same night, about nine o'clock, a quarrel happened in Canvas Town, between some English and Spanish sailors, which arose to such a height, that one of the latter having drawn a sword or long knife, was obliged to make his escape, after receiving a severe chastisement. Another of the party, being desperately cut, with difficulty got into a shop, where he lay for some time to all appearance dead, but recovered, and got off. During this affray, neither constable or watchman appeared!

One of our female correspondents, observes, this is a most censorious age we live in, and so foolish and prejudiced to a woman's right and fancy over her own dress, that a lady can scarcely appear in public, in any polite dress, but every coxcomb must be talking and pointing at her as a phænomenon in nature's works. Or if they think they cannot carry their ridicule far enough, they must of course take up pen and ink, and scribble a few sentences of incoherent ideas, entirely devoid of sense, and send them for insertion in the papers. They by this means think they expose us to derision, but the fact is, they only expose their own shame and impertinence, in claiming the privilege, or attempting the reformation of what is far beyond the sphere of their understanding.

Last Thursday, arrived the ship Brothers, Capt. On Monday last gloomy winter began to shew his hoary locks, wildly magnificent; stern boreas rambling forth with fleecy bluster, "to explore the continent, and storm the deep." The votaries of winter pleasures, on swift gliding runners mounted, at the sight of myriads of atoms flying, richly anticipated those joyful scenes—while many a helpless family were cringing for fear of winter's starving cold, and the poor sailor, perhaps, with fury merciless, on foaming lee shore driving. Several vessels in the rivers were driven from their anchor; the uncommon height of the tide washed stray lumberous property from different parts of the town; but, on the whole, no capital damage has been sustained.

A correspondent at Flatbush, begs leave to express his wonder and surprise that our great people in the capital do not attend more to propriety and good manners with regard to foreigners. "I am but a country gentleman, and therefore not much acquainted with rules of precedency; but when I was last summer in New York, I had the honor once to dine among the great, and to my surprise I took notice, that had not a certain high foreign personage quickened his pace with no small agility from a grave walk of state, when dinner was announced, several delegates, and others of inferior note, would have got to the head of the table before him. These attentions may seem small to us, but, gentlemen who have been in foreign parts, tell us rank and precedency is indispensibly attended to abroad."

Next Tuesday evening at six o'clock, Mr. [Noah] Webster, will begin a short course of lectures, at Mr. Hulett's, dancing room, in Little Queen St. The course will open with a lecture on education which was read last spring in the City Hall. Tickets four shillings.

We hear that the Old American Company of Comedians are expected in this city in the course of the next week.

A correspondent desires us to communicate the following method of dressing potatoes, which he says may be depended on as a certain way to prevent the wetness which prevails in them; and which, as it makes them extremely unwholesome is a matter of importance. Wash the potatoes clean and put them into a covered pot without any water, on a slow fire; the heat very soon draws out sufficient water to stew them in, and the potatoes, so managed, are dry and mealy, though the very same boiled in the common way, are so wet as to be scarce eatable.

Christmas. This season, perhaps, affords as great variety in this city, as any other, some good people religiously observing it as a time set apart for a most sacred purpose, others revelling in profusion, and paying their sincere devotions to merry Bacchus, others decently feasting with their friends and relatives, stores shut up, almost all kinds of business suspended, in several churches divine service performed. the temples dedicated to the service of merriment, dissipation and folly much crowded; where the sons of gluttony and drunkeness satiate their respective appetites. The scene with these gentry generally concludes about midnight, when they sally forth into the streets, and by their unmeaning, wild extravagant noise, disturb those citizens who would rather sleep than get drunk. The candid will acknowledge this to be a just, though cursory view of the holy days in New-York. Pray how do you like them?

The Brethren of St. John's Lodge No. 2. ancient York Masons, are requested to attend their Lodge Room precisely at eleven o'clock to-morrow morning, to join procession.

On Saturday morning last, Mr. Turner, the first mate of the ship Maurice, was found dead in his cabin. The coroner's inquest, gave in their verdict that he had been suffocated. It appears that on the preceeding evening, he had taken into his cabin a pan with some charcoal, which is supposed to have occasioned his death.

Yesterday was executed pursuant to sentence, for burglary. Thomas Lee, a black man, during the execution, the rope slipped, and caught him by the chin, in which situation he was suspended for near two minutes. He then spoke, saying "It does not choke me," on which the platform was raised and the rope properly fixed, when he was launched into eternity. He appeared to have little concern for his unhappy situation, and but an imperfect idea of the future state.

James Carr, a white man, the other convict, whose life was to have terminated on the same day, was pardoned, in consequence of a petition of many citizens in his favor. Not withstanding the awful spectacle, a number of hardened villains the same night, broke open the store of Mr. Rhinelander, at Burling Slip, and carried off an iron chest containing cash to the amount of one hundred pounds. This they conveyed to the ship yards, but being unable to force it open, they broke into a blacksmith shop and procured the necessary implements for the purpose.
